Western Maryland Scenic Railroad
The Western Maryland Scenic Railroad excursion is an exciting mix of mountain top scenery and rich transportation history. The route travels west through a breach in the Allegheny Mountains over an iron truss bridge, around Helmstetter’s Horseshoe Curve and through the 914 foot Brush Tunnel under Piney Mountain. Climbing grades up to 2.8% on the 16 mile trek, the route follows the former Western Maryland Railroad right-of-way, then joins the old Cumberland & Pennsylvania Railroad. Dating back to 1913, and home to the Western Maryland Scenic Railroad and Canal Place, the Western Maryland Railway Station has been painstakingly restored.

Durbin Rocket
In century-old Durbin, the Durbin Rocket Excursion Train is powered by a very rare steam locomotive – Old #3, one of only three operating Climax geared logging locomotives on earth! Departing the Durbin Depot, this 55-ton antique was built in 1910 for the Moore-Keppel Lumber Co. in nearby Randolph County. Today you can ride in authentic 1920-era coaches and vintage wooden cabooses behind Old #3 as she puffs and whistles along the free-flowing Greenbrier River in northern Pocahontas County.
